

I have had telemarking spam on my phone lines in numerous ways; (1) they act as if I am supposed to know who they are and try to make me think someone in my house has contacted them, (2) I have picked up the line after being gone all day to find it already ringing and contacting some unknown source, (3) I have tried to hang-up on them find that after a minute or more that I can not get a dial tone. I find #3 to be the most dangerous of all tactics and hope you will continue to police such acts in the future.
